Accurate manual focus impossible (lens stops down uncontrollably) ...

The biggest problem when drawing a final conclusion on the X1 is of course the typical Leica price tag - this is the most expensive compact camera on Face detection mode In this mode the LEICA X1 automatically recognizes faces in the image and bases the focus on the closest ones registered. If no faces are detected, the 11 point mode is used.

Functionally the Leica X1 could hardly be more traditional and straightforward. With battery charged, SD or SDHC card installed, and picture parameters set, move the milled lever around the shutter release from OFF to S (single frame) or C (continuous at 2fps, or 3fps in high-speed mode) and you're ready to go.

Detailed Comparison - Camera Decision

The Leica X1 has simply better IQ. All reviews out there say that. Steve Huff prefers the colors, the sharpness, the focus of the X1. The Fuji X100 has so much distortion it bends faces and makes them longer. The X1 lens is compared by M9 Leica users as the same IQ as a M9 with a Leica lens, a great

Unfortunately, though, the X1's implementation of manual focus has a couple of problems. Most importantly, in anything other than dim light the lens stops down uncontrollably, and doesn't open up again to F2.8 for focusing. This makes really accurate manual focus impossible, especially if you're aiming for selective focus at F2.8.

Reid when I got home, and he pointed out that he has discovered what he agrees is a problem with manual focusing on the X1's LCD screen. I had put it down to the somewhat coarse screen that doesn't allow one to be able to decide exactly when focus has been reached.

My Photography with the Leica X1 Jim Radcliffe. March 10, 2010 - What a surprise!
... I tried it but do not care to use manual focus due to the fact that my eyes are just not what they used to be and I'm not wearing reading glasses to focus a camera. Had the X1 had an EVF with a diopter it would have been a different story.
